

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

Roy Vogt, Corporate Power And The Development of New Competition Policies in Canada, Journal of Economic Issues, June, 1985. Reviews the efforts over the past fifteen years to revise competition policies. Finds an increasing reluctance by successive governments to lead.

Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, Annual Report for The Year Ended March 31, 1985. During the fiscal year, the Commission worked on the Petroleum Industry Inquiry and provided hearing officers to preside over examination of witnesses by representatives of the Director of Investigation and Research. No new matters were referred to the Commission in that period.

Kent E. Thomson, Limiting The Search and Seizure Powers of the Combines Investigators: The Southam Decision and Its Aftermath, Canadian Business Law Journal, February, 1985. A comprehensive analysis of the implications of the Southam decision by the Supreme Court of Canada that the search and seizure powers under the Combines Investigation Act are inconsistent with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.